PLAN TO DEFEAT ENEMIES OF LABOR

Leaders Will Meet to Discuss Coming Campaign.

CONGRESSMEN ON THE LIST

Those Who Are Judged Unfriendly to Labor to Be Slated for

Labor leaders throughout the United will gather in Washington next week at the meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, to plan for the political annihilation of such Representatives in Congress as have shown disregard of the demands of organized labor for certain

Since the last meeting of the council efforts have been made to feel the pub-lic pulse, and ascertain just how far the wage earners of the country may be depended upon to record their dissat-isfaction at the polls.

Slated for Defeat.

Further than making the announce ment that the Federation intends to enter the next Congressional election to defeat the men who have sought to block the desired legislation, President Gompers and his followers have thus Gompers and his followers have thus far taken no active steps. Mr. Gompers has received replies from a large number of Representatives in Congress to queries as to their attitude toward organized labor. He will turn them over to the council next week and let the council decide whether they should be made public now or later in the campaign.

Little Labor Legislation.

Congress has done little this session to win the favor of the Federation. Attempts to tighten up the eight-hour law have failed. There will be no anti-injunction legislation, no convict-labor law, and not even a child-labor law for the District of Columbia. In short, not one of the things that the American Federation of Labor asked for in its "bill of grievances" has been accomplished.

John Mitchell Expected.

President John Mitchell, leader of the miners, will be in attendance at the council meeting, it is expected, and will bring up several matters in regard to the coal situation.

FLAG DAY SESSION OF BOOKBINDERS

Lynch-Gompers Also Talks.

The feature of the Flag Day session of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders' convention, now holding plosion. forth at Typographical Temple, was a forth at Typographical Temple, was a short talk to the delegates by James M. Lynch, president of the International Typographical Union.

After stating that this was the first convention he had been able to attend since he became president of the International Typographical Union, he said that the printers had been unusually busy for the past eight months by reason of the strike for the eight-hour day.

Money Problem Solves Itself.

"To believe," said President Lynch, "that the question of money to carry on the eight-hour fight will solve itself. When we entered the fight we had in the international treasury but $70,000, while in the treasuries of the local organizations there was about $300,000 all told. And yet," he added with emphasis, "we have in conducting our phasis, "we have in conducting our phasis, "Secretary Republican Central Comall told. And yet," he added with emphasis, "we have in conducting our fight for the eight-hour day expended $1,500,000. And today we have over forty thousand of our members working for the union scale in eight-hour shops."

President Glocking thanked Mr. Lynch for his words of encouragement and said that the bookbinders had already entered upon the fight for the eight-hour day.

BLUSHING BRIDE DECLARES

PEORIA, Ill., June 14.-Deputy County Clerk Oscar Heinrich heard a new version of the old verse, "Tell me, pretty maiden, are there any more at home like you?" when he issued a marriage license to a comely young man and a handsome maid of Morton. John W. Frank, a prosperous farmer from Morton, accompanied by his bride-elect, Miss Annie Waldbeser, entered the clerk's office shortly before noon. "Waldbeser, Waldbeser," mused Hein-rich aloud. "Where have I heard that name before?"

"O, you issued a license to two of my sisters recently," the maiden coyly re-ponded.

"The third—this must be all," thought

Heinrich.

"But there are two others at home yet; they'll be down later on." the country maid continued and Oscar went to look up his ancient comic opera scores.

equally between Cummins and Perkins. Senator Allison has been for some time known as a compromiser of eminent capacity, and he had found the Dubuque prize package too good to keep.

Then there came a series of close county contests, and Secretary Shaw went out to save the day for Perkins. He made some good speeches, but he lost the towns in which he spoke. He came back, but only to be summoned the comment on the first ballot in the State convention. He made some good speeches, but he lost the towns in which he spoke. When the Secretary's telegram to Da When the Secretary's telegram to Davenport, as given above, got into print the Cummins people decided to know just what they were fighting. They had been fighting pretty much every influence in politics, from the Chicago railroad managers to the Washington delegation, and winning; and if they were also to be forced to fight the White House, they wanted to know it. So the Cummins leader at Davenport rushed off a telegram to "Theodore Roosevelt, Washington," giving the text of the Shaw acceptance and following it with this pointed question to the President:

"The White House,
"Washington, D. C., June 12.
"To Charles Grilke, Secretary Republican Central Committee, Davenport,
Washington, will be confirmed at this washington, will be confirmed at this can Central Committee, Davenport is a Contral Committee, Davenport is, of course, on his own responsibility. The President has sent no message through anybody to lowa Republicans and has not interfered, is not now interfering, and will not interfere in the Iowa factional contest nor in that of any other State.

"WILLIAM LOEB, ir., Secretary."

Dieplaasure at White House.

Perhaps Mr. Loeb's answer would have been less emphatic and vigorous if he hadn't been pestered for twentyfour hours with newspaper correspondents armed with copies of the Shaw telegram to Davenport and asking explanations. As it is, the reply strongly planations. As it is, the reply strongly suggests the extreme displeasure which is known to be felt at the White House over the action of Secretary Shaw. It is pointed out that the Secretary has assumed before to represent the Administration in a State campaign. Last fall he went out to Columbus to make a reply to the famous Taft anti-machine speech.

The Ohio Republican leaders had been desperately trying to extort an indorsement of Herrick from the President, and had failed. They sent for Shaw, who told his audience in substance that he "wouldn't be here if the President didn't want Governor Herrick elected." That gave the Administration a good deal of worry, and it is now noted that the Shaw effort to line up the Administration behind the Iowa machine is very similar to the Ohio enterprise.

There is intense interest in Washington in the explanation the Secretary may have made at Davenport last night, and in the result of the primaries that will be held tonight. The Cummins people in Iowa are jubilant and positive of carrying the State convention. Nearly all the counties have held their conventions, and Cummins has a comfortable lead to date, with chances favoring him in most of the remaining countles.

"It was like this," he replied. "Washington correspondents had been wiring reports that I had quarreled with the President, that we were not on good terms, that there was friction or whatever you may call it. So I put into my reply to the Lincoln Club at Daver.port the statement that I had consulted with the President for the purpose of showing that I was not on bad terms with the President, that we had not quarreled."

Mr. Shaw was neard by a fair-sized audience at the Turner Grand Opera House last night. He devoted most of his effort to showing that Governor Cummins' theories were practically those of the Democratic party. He appealed to his hearers to declare against a Cummins delegation to the State convention, so that he (Mr. Shaw) might not be discredited in the coming campaign by a declaration by the lowa State ronvention for a candidate and principles to which he was antagonistic.
